

A PAIR OF SOCKS

Stripes and polka dots don't match—they're two different patterns. Children learn all about matching patterns as a lone red-and-blue-striped sock searches for its match.

On pages 32 and 33 of this book, there are several suggestions as to how you can interact with your child while you're reading this book as well as things you can do when you've finished.

As long as feet are a part of the subject of this book, why not trace around your child's foot and start a "running" record of how much he/she is growing.
