

How The Rabbit
Made Ketchup

Blurb

A charming story about a rabbit who makes a condiment. But he is not a very good speller.

“This is a good hilarious story for all the family to enjoy.”

J. K.(Just Kidding) Rowling

About the Author:

Hema Patel doesn't even like ketchup. She has no idea why she is even writing about it. She likes spelling and rabbits.

Rabbits are cute, cuddly and they like carrots. And Hema likes carrots too!

February 21, 2009

How The Rabbit Made Ketchup

Written and Illustrated by Hema Patel, 2nd grade

Once upon a time there lived a rabbit who was walking home from work.

He was passing through the garden when suddenly he stepped on a tomato.

SPLAT!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

He put his finger in the tomato sauce and licked it.

He said, "Hmmm....this needs
some salt."

Then he ran home and got some salt. He came back and added the salt. Then he tasted it and said, "This needs some vinegar, spices and high fructose corn syrup."

So he ran home and got all that. He came and put the ingredients in and tasted it and said, "This is delicious!"

corn Syrup

Vinegar

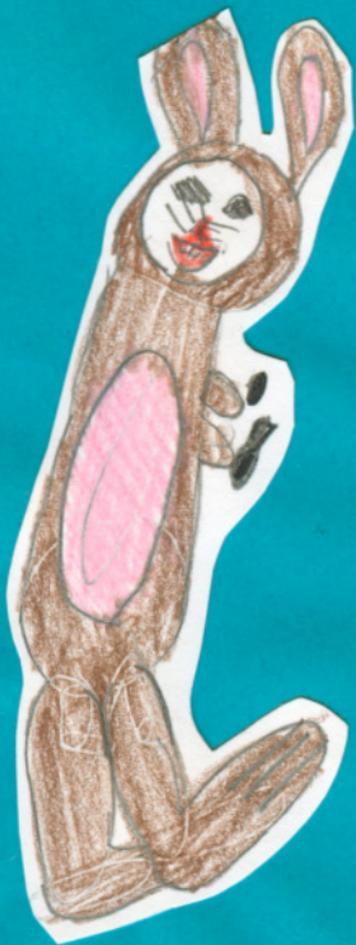

SP
Ce

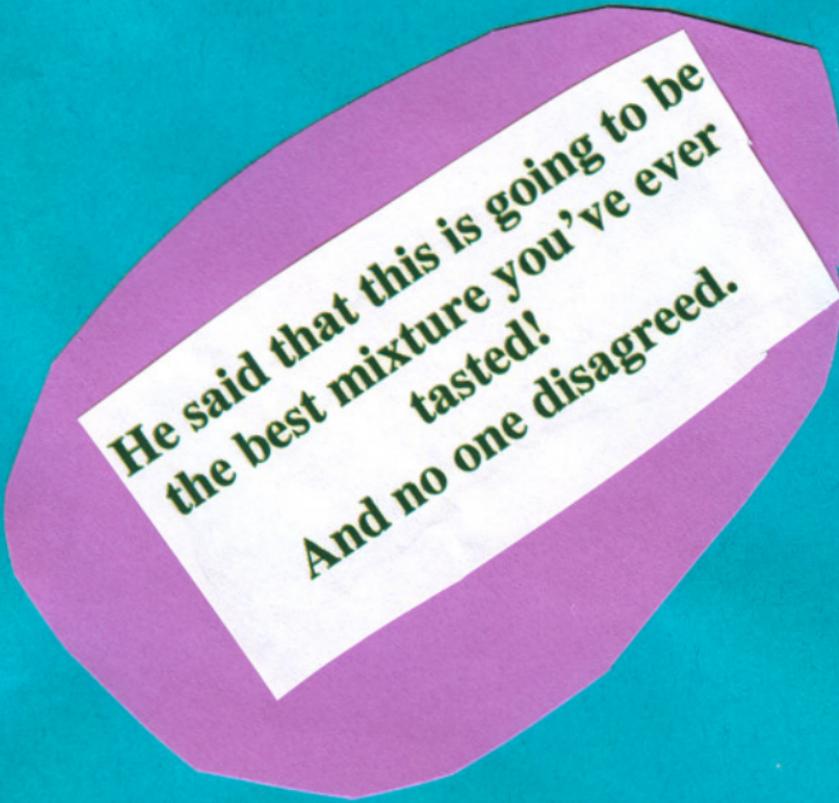

What a coincidence. There was a picnic that day and he was supposed to bring any kind of condiment! So the rabbit got a jar, put the mixture in the jar and went to the picnic.

Everyone there was saying, “Come on, catch up!” because he was late unfortunately.

“Hmmm,” he said. “That’s a great name for my mixture.”

But sadly, he was not a very good speller. So he wrote on the jar with a permanent marker:
KETCHUP.

He said that this is going to be the best mixture you've ever tasted!
And no one disagreed.

Come on catch up

Milk